LONDON, FEBRUARY 20, 2023 – StoneX Group Inc. (“StoneX or “The Company”) announced today that it has launched StoneX Plus, a platform that leverages StoneX’s exclusive dairy market tools and analysis on a single and customizable solution that empowers market participants to make smarter business decisions.

The StoneX Plus platform delivers access to leading market intelligence, insights, and forecasts, supported by a global team of commodities industry experts covering dairy pricing, production, and trade data. Content on the platform is updated continuously, and clients have access to the global portfolio of StoneX exchange traded risk-management products.

The platform is fully customizable to allow clients to tailor charting and data specific to their specific business needs. Content covers all traded dairy market products across the CME, EEX, SGX-NZX, and OTC exchanges.

Liam Fenton, Global Head of Dairy and Food Group, StoneX, commented: “StoneX Plus delivers the necessary tools and intelligence that producers need to enhance their trading, pricing and risk management decisions. Like all commodities segments, dairy is not immune to natural price volatility, requiring market participants to have instant access to data to drive decision-making in both the short- and long-term. The launch of StoneX Plus also furthers the company’s ongoing commitment to digitize key solutions and expand our offerings across different regions and industries.”

StoneX’s global dairy team has over 20 years of experience in providing clients with full-service brokerage, risk management, and research services. StoneX delivers comprehensive data and commentaries on segments that can influence dairy prices such as macroeconomic and supply chain trends; grain, livestock, and energy prices; and region-specific issues. Research commentaries are available through the StoneX Market Intelligence platform, complimented by in-person events and webinars hosted or attended by StoneX experts.
